problem4

- Python seems very good at connecting various softwares into one point due to its flexibility with variables and types. It is easy to make systems fast due to all the tools and software that is available out there already.